The European hotellerie Market

The European hotel market in 2025–2026 is experiencing strong growth, driven by the luxury segment and a significant increase in investments, which are expected to exceed €16 billion.

Destinations and Key Strengths:

- Italy: Strong appeal in the luxury segment, with iconic art cities (Rome, Venice and Florence) and resort destinations.
- Spain and France: Confirmed among the leading markets in terms of investment and accommodation capacity.
- Greece: Leading country for the number of five-star properties.
- United Kingdom: Primary market in terms of transaction volume.

Hospitality Market: Trends

Wellbeing and health at the heart of the hotel offering

The pandemic has accelerated awareness of the importance of health and wellbeing, turning them into core elements of the hotel offering rather than simple add-on services.

Focus on:

- Air purification and air quality monitoring
- Antibacterial materials in high-touch areas
- Advanced disinfection, now a standard practice but less visible

Hospitality Market: Trends

The rise of sustainability

The hospitality industry is undergoing a profound transformation towards more sustainable practices. Superficial approaches are gradually giving way to structured commitments:

- Environmental certification becoming the norm rather than the exception
- Visibility of the carbon footprint of hotel stays

Sustainability as a Competitive Factor

75% of travellers state that they are attentive to sustainability. This has a direct impact on investments, partner choices, and the positioning of establishments.
